JOE MAYER AND HIS TOWN

http://www.mayerareachamber.org/index_files/page0006.htm

In 1881 a young man with hazel eyes and black hair named Joseph Mayer journeyed from the mining camp of Tip Top to the banks of the Big Bug Creek. The clear running water and the tall trees were a welcome sight.

Joe Mayer was born Joseph Hoffmayer in 1846 in Olean, New York. Only French was spoken in his home. At age 14 he left home as a result of a troublesome life. He changed his name to avoid being found by his ill tempered father. The ambitious young man made his way west by way of the circus and wagon trains. Joe was bright and ambitious. He learned to ride, cook and bake and was quick with figures. He made friends where ever he went because he was honest, reliable and generous. A couple of his friends were Buffalo Bill and Wild Bill Hickok.

During Joe's wanderings from Colorado to Kansas to New Mexico, he met Sarah Belle Wilbur. Sarah had red hair and blue eyes. She was born in Maine and could trace her ancestors back to the Mayflower. The two traveled west to Globe, Arizona. Their wedding was postponed due to an outbreak of smallpox. Sarah had been vaccinated against smallpox and nursed the sick using the juice from canned tomatoes and castor oil as her only medicines. Joe was sick with smallpox and lost all his hair (it came back thick and straight rather than curly). His face was pockmarked for years.

They left Globe and moved to a gold mine outside the city where Joe bought half-interest in the boardinghouse. They were finally married there on December 11, 1877. They lived a year at this mining camp then moved to Tip Top in the Bradshaw Mountains. Here they bought a restaurant and stayed until the silver ran out at the mine.

Joe rode over the mountains to the banks of the Big Bug Creek. There was a shack and corral owned by William A. Muncy, a friend of Joe's. Bill sold the place to Joe for $3500 in gold on a handshake. When Joe brought Sadie and their two infant daughters to his new home, they spent the night at Bumble Bee Stage Station. They then traveled through Antelope Station (later Cordes) and then nine more miles to Big Bug Station.

Joe hired carpenters from Prescott to build their new home and stage station on the banks of the Big Bug Creek. There were long porches front and back, one big room was a general merchandise store with a bar for thirsty miners and cowboys, and adjoining was a dining room and kitchen.

The station was a success because of Joe and Sarah's hospitality. This was a time when roads were dangerous with highwaymen, raiding Indians and weather hazards. Those traveling from Phoenix to Prescott were glad to reach the ease of Big Bug Station. The Wells Fargo Express from Phoenix stopped at the station often carrying gold and guarded by a shotgun rider. The driver carried a shovel to remove thick, gummy mud from the wheels after a rain. In 1882, the Wells Fargo stage station known as the Big Bug Station was renamed Mayer after its owner, Joe Mayer.

Joe had many enterprises. He bought horses and branded them BM; he accumulated a herd of cattle and branded them with a pine tree. He planted an orchard with trees he shipped in along with the black walnut, mulberry, cherry and plum trees which grew wild. There was a deep well for the household; trees and garden were irrigated with creek water. Joe had the contract for mail service between Mayer and Stoddard and delivered mail by horseback.

Place miners worked every stream for miles around for gold, silver, copper and lead. Joe Mayer grubstaked many prospectors and acquired interest in small mining ventures. Joe owned the French Lily, the Butternut and was half-owner with Jim Slack of the Henrietta. The Big Ledge Development Company bought his mines. The first smelter in Mayer was built in 1902 by George Treadwell of San Francisco. It used oil for fuel and proved ineffective for processing large quantities of ore. He constructed a second smelter in the same area. It provided many new jobs and brought more families to town. The last smelter to come to Mayer was built by the Grey Eagle Reduction Company with H. A. Wagoner as president. It closed after three years.

In 1889 onyx was discovered in Mayer. It is said to be one of the largest and finest deposits in the U. S. At first, Joe thought it was petrified wood. Joe, George & Al McCann, and Captain Buckey O'Neill formed a company for the mine. It was then sold to George Underhill and his son with George becoming the superintendent of the operation. The rock was cut into blocks that were fifteen feet by ten feet by two feet; these blocks were lifted out by derrick and shipped to Vermont where it was cut and polished. The company operated two years and then shut down due to litigation.

Sarah sent for her mother and Uncle Hiram. Hiram took advantage of the good soil and ready water and started his own garden, orchard and herd of cattle branded HY.

Sarah, known as Sadie, was active in the community. She was the first postmistress in Mayer when the first post office was established in 1884. She opened at most any time for residents to get their mail, including Sundays. She used a small room in her home for the post office. There was no physician in town, so Sadie often acted as the town doctor. She was known to extract slivers of steel from miners' eyes using a magnet. She often set broken bones. Sadie was a fine shot, one evening there was a disturbance in the henhouse; she opened the window and fired a shot. In the morning she found her old pet hen shot through the eye.

Joe and Sadie parented four children – Mary Bell, named for her paternal grandmother, was the oldest and was nicknamed Mamie. Martha Gertrude, named for her maternal grandmother, was next and was nicknamed Martie. Their son was Wilbur Joseph and nicknamed Burr. In 1892 another daughter was born, Winifred Lucille, nicknamed Winnie. Mamie had thick, wavy, long brown hair and pansy-blue eyes. Martie also had dark hair and blue eyes.

Joe and Sadie's children all attended the university in Tucson. Burr then attended business college in Los Angeles where he became reacquainted with Annie S. Skelton whom he then married. Martie married Dr. Robert Nelson Looney on June 28, 1900. Dr. Looney practiced surgery in Mayer, the hospital at McCabe and then Prescott. He served many years as state health officer. He also served as physician and surgeon for the Santa Fe Railroad.

The town of Mayer experienced its first disaster in February of 1890. It had been raining heavily with no sign of the downpour letting up. Joe and Sadie moved their possessions to higher ground, and their Chinese servant Pete cooked and baked. A dam built six miles up Big Bug Creek by a placer mining company gave way sending water and boulders downstream, uprooting trees and killing and rushing dead cattle down into Mayer. The original Big Bug Station was swept away, but Joe was quick in rebuilding. He found part of his house downstream and salvaged the lumber. Everyone pitched in and Joe hired two carpenters, Fred Steece (a Mayer minister) and George Rich. Meanwhile the Mayer family lived in a two room cabin built by George and Al McCann.

HISTORICAL MAYER PROPERTIES

12780 Central (also known as Lower Main) Mayer Business Block National Register of Historic Places
Built in 1908 from red brick manufactured in Mayer. Originally built as a saloon and dance hall, barbershop and market.
Now occupied by an antique store.

Next door – This building was built in 1930 and served as the post office until 1958. Now occupied by a print shop.

Across the street – Mayer State Bank building was built in 1918 and closed during the depression, Mayer Hotel was built in 1897 by Joe Mayer (now apartments) and the red brick buildings which were originally Cribs (bordellos). Cribs were built in 1902 because there was no more room in the hotel next door.

13010 Central Assay Office

Built prior to 1900 (exact date unknown). Originally part of a mining claim; has the original structure of redwood. Building sets on redwood piers on slabs of onyx from the old Mayer onyx mine. This building once used as a bakery. Ghosts of a man and a woman have been seen. The man seems friendly; is tall, dark and slender. The woman appears to be attired in a lounging gown.

Across the street is The White House Hotel, built in 1904 by Frank W. Wagner, sold to H. B. White in 1908. Arizona Governor Hunt and actor Tom Mix were once guests. Currently owned by Clyde and Sonya McDonald and occupied by a caretaker.

Red Brick Schoolhouse on Main Street between 4th and 5th Streets. Built in 1913. The Mayer family donated the land where the building sets as well as the bricks. Indoor plumbing was installed in 1930's when it became a fully accredited high school. The building was retired from service as the high school in 1981. The building was used for instruction until 2002. Bernie Kruse, wrote a grant to the state department requesting renewal funds to restore the building. Thanks to the grant and lots of efforts and hard work, the Red Brick Schoolhouse will serve as an administrative office for the Mayer Unified School District. The building still has the original school bell.

Previous schoolhouse is across the street on 5th Street at corner of Main and was built and donated to the town by Joe Mayer. After the red brick schoolhouse was built, this building was used for a community building.
(Currently a private home)

12701 Main Street (corner of 3rd Street)

1906 Victorian bungalow built by Wilbur "Burr" Mayer, son of Joseph Mayer. The home still has original oak coffered 12 foot ceilings, oak floors, oak built-in sideboard with antique leaded glass, oak moldings and doors and oak built-in library cabinets with antique leaded glass. 13050 Main Street (corner of Pine and Main)

This home, built in 1917, was the home of Bill Cordes. The town of Cordes was named after his family. His nephew Henry Cordes attended Mayer schools. The home has not had many renovations; there is an old wood mining shack in the backyard. This is set up as an old miner might have lived. There is an old 2-holer behind it. Another shack on the property was a carriage house.

Next door is the old Mayer Hospital built in 1902. This building is in territorial style architecture with wide covered porch which accommodated patients in wheel chairs. It served this region as a TB sanitarium. It is now a private residence.
